

Course Description: - Designed to provide students with a greater understanding of moisture issues in buildings and be able to apply this knowledge to their current and future projects.

In order to better understand moisture problems the course first addresses the sources of water and then consequences of moisture exposure. Mold, mildew and condensation are discussed as they form one of the most significant and least understood aspects of moisture problems. In the remainder of the course each major building enclosure system is reviewed in general and then specifically with respect to moisture management.

This course is focused at building contractors and supervisors along with architects, engineers and owners who are involved in the construction of buildings with the goal of increasing the understanding of water issues and solutions.
